DEDICATION

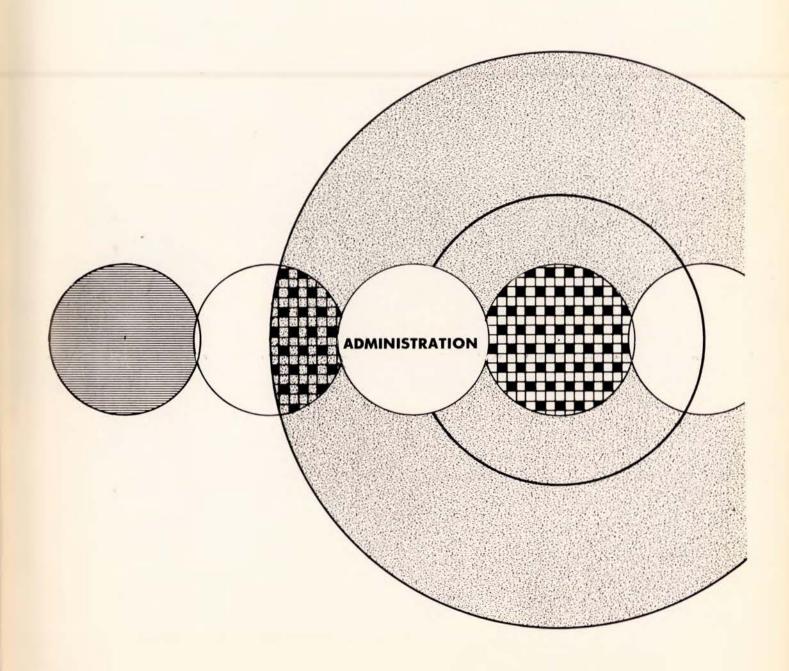

No community is better than its schools. Good schools make good communities. Back in 1890, the year this institution was founded, progressive citizens of Trenton were cognizant of the important role schools played in any policy pertaining to community growth.

The administration of this institution knew also that to serve the community well the school had to adjust itself to changes which manifested themselves in the community with time. The history of the Trenton Junior College and School of Industrial Arts has documented how successful it has been for the past fifty years maintaining itself in a state of flux so as to adjust itself readily to technological and academic requirments demanded of it by the diversified and complex industries of the community.

Both the community and the school have grown considerably in the last fifty years. Trenton, from a small 'Main Street' town to a large industrial city; Our school, from a humble beginning as an 'Evening Drawing School' to a dynamic community college.

We, the students of the Trenton Junior College, are proud of these accomplishments. We are also grateful to the citizens of our community for their far sightedness and sympathetic cooperation and understanding of our needs and for the continuous support that made our growth possible.

It is with genuine pleasure that we dedicate this issue of our Yearbook to the Citizens of the Trenton Community.

HENRY J. PARCINSKI a native of Trenton a graduate of the Trenton School of Industrial Arts....President of the Trenton Junior College. Following his initial desire, to study Electrical Engineering, Mr. Parcinski began training at the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, where he received his E. E. Degree. He was awarded his M. A. Degree at Columbia University, and attended in-service classes in education at Rutgers University and the Trenton State Teachers College. He has done graduate work at the Moore School, University of Pennsylvania. Former visiting Professor of Electrical Engineering at Princeton University, Mr. Parcinski is a licensed, professional engineer, and has been head of the Trenton Junior College Engineering Department.
